Type RA version is particularly appealing because of its higher performance. In 2002 models, the Type RA offers not only lighter weight, but also a closer ratio gearbox, sharper steering, a rally-car roof vent above the driver, and a mechanical Driver Controlled Center Differential (DCCD) with more effective performance than the standard viscous-coupling center LSD.

The exclusive Spec C version further enhances performance by adding such refinements as larger inlet ports, more aggressive cams, lighter windows, lighter hood and roof panels, and better handling around corners thanks to an increased caster angle and faster steering rack.
