The Mercedes AMG A35 is the cheapest proper AMG model, but still boasts some impressive vital statistics that justify the badge it wears. It's effectively a less extreme version of the AMG A45 S, which is the range-topping Mercedes A-Class. Like that hot hatch, it's been to the AMG tuning experts from the little town of Affalterbach in Germany, and has come back with not only a more aggressive look and four-wheel drive, but also a 2.0-litre turbocharged petrol engine boosted to 316bhp. Better still, as well as a hatchback, the A35 is available in a version based on the Mercedes A-Class Saloon so you can choose between more rear space or a hatchback roof, depending on your requirements. Both are as fast and – thanks to their mild-hybrid engine tech – surprisingly efficient.
